Red China Has "Happy Look" Like Russia

TOKYO — Chou En-Lai of the Chinese government today in an abrupt switch from his warlike tactics to negotiate a "peaceful liberation" of Formosa and said agreement could be reached at Geneva next week on the registration of U.S. prisoners.

The Chinese premier and foreign minister, in a major policy speech broadcast by Peiping radio, hailed the Western powers willing to cooperate at the Summit conference and urged concrete actions now to end the cold war by negotiation.

He suggested a Far Eastern conference to seek ways for easing Far Eastern tensions and said the Peiping regime was ready to undertake obligations with other countries to cut arms levels. It was one of the most conciliatory speeches he has made.

On Formosa, he said, "conditions permitting, the Chinese people are ready to seek the liberation of Formosa by peaceful means."

He said the possibility of "peaceful liberation" will continue to increase "provided the United States does not interfere with China's internal affairs." And he made it more clear than ever that Red China was anxious to discuss the matter with the United States.

On the American prisoners now held by the Communist government, he said the talks opening on Monday in Geneva by American and Red Chinese ambassadors meant a reasonable settlement could be reached if both sides were sincere.

But he asked for third party help since the United States and Red China do not maintain diplomatic relations. He added, "the number of American civilians in China is small, and their question can be easily solved."

He did not make clear the Red Chinese attitude on 11 flares held with 40 civilians but appeared to be lumping them together while pressing for the return of "thousands of Chinese students" from the United States.

This Week's Balance Sheet In The Hot And Cold War

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

The week's good and bad news on the international balance sheet:

The Good

1. President Eisenhower and the prime ministers of Great Britain, France and Russia agreed that their "Summit" conference in Geneva was a success. "It is my judgment that the prospects of a lasting peace with justice, well-being and broader freedom are brighter," Eisenhower said in his closing statement.

2. Reporting later to the people of the world, Prime Minister Anthony Eden announced that Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev had accepted an invitation to visit London next spring.

3. Hope was strengthened that 51 Americans now held in Communist China might be released. It was announced that negotiations would start in Geneva next Monday between the United States and basador, to Czechoslovakia and the Chinese Red ambassador to Poland on the release of Americans. The State Department emphasized that no question of recognition of Red China was involved. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said the Geneva talks might lead later to a meeting between him and Chinese Communist Premier Chou En-Lai on broader issues.

3. Austria regained its sovereignty as the result of the ratification of the recently concluded Austrian treaty. The flags of the four occupying powers — United States, Britain, France and Russia — were hoisted down from their staffs on the Allied Council Building in Vienna. Austria had lost its independence when Nazi Germany seized it on March 12, 1938.

The Bad

1. Trigger — happy Bulgarian anti-aircraft gunners shot down an Israeli air liner which inadvertently crossed a few miles into the territory of the Communist Iron Curtain country on a flight from London to Israel. Fifty-eight persons including 13 Americans — and five Russians — were killed. Bulgaria apologized. But the tragedy emphasized the fact that in spite of some relaxation of East-West tension, the situation along the Iron Curtain frontier facing Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey is still bad.

2. The armistice in Korea entered its third year, with no peace treaty in sight. The Communists have charged ever since the truce was signed South Korea threatened, on its anniversary day Wednesday, to overthrow the Polish and Czechoslovak Communist members of the truce supervisory committee, out of the country.

3. The situation in Indochina continued to get more threatening. South Viet Nam forces were still fighting troops of rebel political-religious sects. Viet Nam Premier Ngo Dinh Diem has refused United States, British and French pressure to discuss with Communist Northern Viet Nam the national election, which, under the Indochina armistice, is supposed to be held next year to unify the country.

Man Headed For Planets As U.S.A. And Russia Make Plans For Launching Of Small Satellite

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 30 (AP) — Man is headed for the planets.

Responsible scientists agreed on that today in the wake of a White House announcement that this country will launch a tiny artificial moon some time in 1957-58.

The first man-made earth satellite — which the components already exist — will be an awkward, fledgling flight.

But it will demonstrate man's power to snap the gravitational shackles which have kept him and his workers earthbound until now.

In the words of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson it will mean "breaking the space barrier." It will mean that the not-representing signs are coming down among the planets. The first satellite will be followed by improved versions as the science develops.

Scientists have long been prodding each other and this government to get going on a project to launch small unmanned "space ships" to explore the vast unknown which exists at the top of earth's atmosphere. Their unanimous conclusion was: It can be done.

President Eisenhower said so ahead. So jubilant were the proponents of rocket flight that no one thought to ask who would do it first.

It could be the Russians. They announced six months ago that "creating an artificial satellite of the earth" was feasible. A little later they said they were establishing a laboratory for satellite research, and Friday night, after the U.S. announcement, they said they too were preparing to send up a man-made moon.

Friday's White House announcement said the United States would launch a satellite approximately the size of a basketball some time during the International Geophysical Year IGY which starts in July, 1957, and concludes in December, 1958.

The IGY is an undertaking of some 40 nations to explore all possible aspects of the earth, its atmosphere, and the solar and cosmic radiations which constantly bombard it.

The U.S. announcement carried no overtones of competition with Russia or any other nation. It said merely that this country, for attractive peaceful scientific purposes, will launch into the sky an artificial moon which will circle the earth between 200 and 300 miles up at a speed of 18,000 miles an hour.

All nations, including Russia, will benefit equally from the information it gleams in its 90-minute revolution around the earth on the frontier of space.

Co-op Store Broken In To Early Today

The Calloway County Soil Improvement Association was broken into this morning between 1:30 and 2:00 o'clock.

Nothing apparently was taken from the store, because the thief was interrupted by city police.

According to Chief Warren, City Patrolmen Norman Lovens and Leo Alexander were making a routine "run" down into that area, when they saw someone on the porch of the firm.

They immediately went to the firm and the thief ran inside the building. The police officers attempted to cover the building to prevent his escape, however the thief was able to get away.

Police were making another check today in the building. Entrance was gained by breaking out a window at the rear of the building.

U.S. Farmers In Russia Are Being Treated Like Heroes

By KENNETH BRODNEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

NOVOROSISSK, Russia (AP) — The 12 touring American agriculturists said today the Russians were beginning to treat them more like heroes than plain dirt farmers.

They said that agriculture is being pushed further and further into the background by the cheering throngs that greet them in every provincial town.

Delegation leader Dean William E. Lambert, of the University of Nebraska, conceded that goodwill was becoming a mighty factor in the visit.

"In addition to giving us an understanding of Soviet agriculture," he said, "our visit seems to be doing a great deal towards creating goodwill for American among the many groups of Russian people we have met."

Biggest Crowd So Far
"We are not only agriculturists, but we are men of goodwill," the Americans here Friday night in becoming typical. It was the type of welcome usually reserved for heroes.

More than 10,000 shouting, clapping, smiling, pushing citizens of this Black Sea port jammed the dock to greet the Americans on their arrival from Odessa. It was the biggest crowd encountered by the farmers so far.

The throngs were so thick that for 45 minutes the Americans could not leave the ship.

Red Carry Signs
For the first time, the Russians included painted signs in their official welcome. Written in both English and Russian in huge white letters on red background, the signs read:

"Long live the friendship and cooperation between the American and Soviet people."

The smiling Soviets handed the Americans as many bouquets that the flowers filled the visitors' hotel rooms almost to the ceiling. It was all the Americans could do to get some rest for their trip to Krasnodar, the rich Kuban agricultural area, and the virgin land where a new great Soviet farming experiment is being conducted.

The Americans came here from Yalta, the hush Crimean resort where the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Sir Winston Churchill and the late Josef Stalin held their historic wartime conference. The farmers visited the white marble palace of Tsar Nicholas II where the conference took place. It is now a rest home for Soviet workers.

Cool Air Aids Part Of The Nation

By UNITED PRESS

Cool air swept in an arc around the East, West and north rims of the nation today, but the Midwest continued to sizzle.

Residents of midcontinent pressed for a weekend siege of near-100-degree temperatures with the remote possibility of relief by Sunday night or Monday.

Meanwhile, there was no relief from the rising number of drownings and other deaths due to the heat.

At least 15 persons have been fatally stricken by the suffocating weather in the Midwest, five in Chicago where readings were expected to go over 90 for the 18th straight day today — another new record.

Pigs Get Sunburn
It was so hot at Chicago's Brookfield Zoo Friday that nine little white pigs turned pink from sunburn. Zoo attendants soothed them with suntan lotion.

At Peoria, Ill., seven cases of heat prostration were reported.

But in the East, West and Far North, temperatures ranged from the 60s to the low 80s, and humidities were low.

New York reported a mid-day reading Friday of 78, while Philadelphia, which had had 20 days of 90-degree or better temperatures this month, blissfully enjoyed temperatures in the mid-70s.

The heat produced unique situations in the heat belt.

Kindly beaugs sent their wilted workers home early by the thousands. In Chicago, workers on a new bridge quit at noon when they found sun-scorched steel impossible to handle.

All over the Midwest, movie theater operators reported big crowds that sat or slept through two or more shows seeping up the air conditioning.

In Cleveland, the situation was different. The city investigated complaints that water pumped into swimming pools from Lake Erie was too cold — a shivering 58 degrees.

WEATHER REPORT

Southwest Kentucky — Fair and quite warm, high today 95. Fair tonight, low 75. Sunday partly cloudy and warm, scattered thunderstorms in afternoon and evening. Low tonight southeast Kentucky around 70.

Kentucky Weather Summary

Condition Child For Hospital Trip

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Tell your child why, if he is going to the hospital.

Even if it's just for a tonsillectomy, your child should be prepared emotionally, says Dr. Nanette Dice, a University of Michigan psychiatrist.

"It is better," said Dr. Dice, "to answer questions frankly and briefly rather than keep the child in suspense."

It might make it easier to stay with the child while he is hospitalized. If this isn't possible, let the child take part of home with him in the form of a favorite toy, a baseball glove, or a family photograph.

The psychiatrist cautioned against covering up the unpleasantness of the forthcoming hospital experience. Tell the child the truth, she advised.

The psychiatrist said that a certain amount of readjustment takes place after the child returns home.

"Most children," she said, "are mildly upset for a week or 10 days after an operation."

But often the child gains emotionally from the first hospital experience.

"A feeling of having been able to pass through and deal with danger and pain may add to the child's self-assurance and sense of security," she said.

PLAN FEED SUPPLIES FOR WINTERING STOCK

Stockmen are arranging silos and other storages for grain, hay and other roughages for their livestock next winter. Home-grown feed reduces the cost of producing meat milk and eggs.

A leaflet of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky, sets that a milk cow needs 30 bushels of corn and 2 tons of hay a year, in addition to protein supplement. One hundred laying hens will eat about 80 bushels of corn and 3,000 pounds of protein supplement a year. Ten bushels of corn, 120 pounds of supplement and 2 tons of hay are required to winter a yearling steer.

Depending on the class of livestock to which it is fed, 100 pounds of corn supplemented with protein, pasture and harvested forages will produce 20 dozen eggs, or 300 pounds of 4 per cent milk, or 380 pounds of milk-fat heavy calf, or 118 pounds of spring lamb and 9 pounds of wool, or 100 pounds of beef on a feeder calf wintered with grain and then grazed without grain.

Few farmers are getting as much feed from pastures as they should, it is stated in the leaflet. Feed value is lost through poor haying practices and wasteful use of hay.

Many farmers, it is claimed, could produce meat, or milk as much as they are now producing with a fourth to half less feed if they would control parasites and diseases, balance their rations, use better stock and make full use of home-grown pastures and roughages.

Petroleum jelly or lard will remove lipstick or rouge stains from linens. Work the fat into the stain section, sponge with carbon tetrachloride, and launder.

To keep household sponges fresh, soak them in cold water.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF CALLOWAY COUNTY

I am vitally interested in the candidacy of Hon. J. M. Ferguson for Attorney General at the Primary election August 6. I am a native of Calloway County, and was admitted to the Bar in 1900.

I served as City Attorney of Murray and represented Calloway County in the Legislature in the regular and special sessions in 1906. For the past seven and a half years I have served as Assistant Attorney General with Mr. Ferguson who, for the past three and a half years was First Assistant Attorney General. He is a native of Muhlenberg County in the First Congressional District, is married and has a wife and two daughters, and is a veteran of World War II.

I am one of the three natives of Calloway County since its formation in 1821 to have served as a statewide officer, the other two being Col. G. A. C. Holt who was Lieutenant Governor shortly after the Civil War, and Hon. Rainey T. Wells who was State Tax Commissioner for several years.

Mr. Ferguson and myself will greatly appreciate your vote and influence.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN
"Indeed she has!" The stranger intervened swiftly. "She has a phobia about automatic elevators. That's how we first met."
"How did you know that?" cried Sara. "I never told anyone about that first meeting with Gerry."
"How many times do I have to tell you? I am Gerry. You told me."
"Wait a minute, Miss Dacre. You do forget things, don't you? You told me about your first meeting with Gerry last night. And Miss Jenkins. How many others have you told? Think a minute."
Sara forced herself to think coherently. "Only Dr. Gallus. I told him about the phobia, but not about the first meeting with Gerry."
Sara's eyes searched the stranger's face. She spoke impulsively. "If you are the real Gerry, why don't you admit you were with me in the Automat yesterday?"
"Perhaps that's the reason you're pretending this isn't the real Gerry," Sanders' tone was stinging. "Simply because he won't back up your story."
"No, no!" Sara put both hands to her head. "It's not the same voice and he doesn't look the same, but... he did know about my being afraid in the elevator... That shook me for a moment. I suppose any impostor would have to be briefed thoroughly. They could have got the elevator story from the real Gerry, if they asked him how he first met me."
"Then why didn't they get the Automat story from the real Gerry, too?"
"Because they didn't think to ask the real Gerry where he had seen me last."
"According to you, they picked up the real Gerry at the Automat when you were there."
"Yes, but they hadn't have seen me or known I was there when it happened. I didn't see them. It could have been their one oversight. That and his calling me 'Sara' instead of 'Dacre'."
"Did he always call you Dacre?"
"Of course not. At first it was 'Miss Dacre.' But it was never 'Sara.'"
"Wait a minute." The changeling Gerry spoke more smoothly than hitherto. His tone was almost conciliatory now. "I think I can straighten this out. I do remember meeting you in the 10-cent store. And I did go to a cafeteria afterward. I had to dash off without a word of apology because I suddenly realized that, if I didn't, I would miss my Long Island train. When you hurried the whole thing at me so suddenly, just now, it didn't ring a bell because I was thinking of the place as a cafeteria. If you said 'cafeteria' instead of 'Automat,' I would have remembered instantly. Are you sure it was an Automat? As for calling you 'Sara'... well, I've always wanted to."
"That's torn it!" Sara's voice was rarely so shrill. "Isn't this just what an impostor would do? Make a slip when he's confronted with some past incident that isn't in his briefing? First, try to carry it off with a firm denial? Then, when he sees it's really important, pretend suddenly to remember it? What could be a more obvious lie? He was thinking of the place as a cafeteria so he didn't know what I meant when I said 'Automat!'"

Now the look in the stranger's eyes was ugly, almost murderous. How could she ever have taken him for Gerry for a single moment?
"Hard to please, aren't you? I back you up and you throw me over!"
"You're not Gerry!" A sob shook her words. "Gerry never spoke like that to me in his life. You wouldn't dare impermatize him if there were a chance of his ever coming back. You've killed him!"
"Before anyone could speak, a light tap fell on the door."
"Judith!" cried Sara. "She'll back me up."
But it wasn't Judith. The uniformed policeman opened the door. A plump, pleasant-looking Negro came into the room. She looked at the uniform in amazement. Then she saw the young man and smiled, as sweet as molasses. "I'm so sorry I'm late this morning, Mr. Hone. You got company? I'll start in the kitchen, so I won't bother you."
"That's all right, Lucy." The stranger spoke her name easily, without a moment's hesitation. No one said another word until the kitchen door had closed. "Well, Miss Dacre?" It was a sour smile on the captain's face, but just then any smile was better than a frown. "Satisfied? Or is the cleaning woman in the conspiracy, too?"
Sara, stolidly, "And the man does look like Gerry. She expected to see Gerry here, so she saw him."
"You've wasted enough of my time!" The stranger was almost shouting. "I—"
Again a knock interrupted them. A uniformed man opened the door. A uniformed man opened the door. "Judith!" clamored Sara. "Look—"
"Quiet!" The captain's voice rasped. Judith came in sprightly and quietly as a cat that suspects dogs in ambush. The raw mustard yellow of her severe suit would have destroyed the looks of any other woman. Somehow, with its touches of black velvet, it heightened the originality of her sallow face and dark, intelligent eyes.
She glanced at them all, then spoke in her usual, clear, agreeable voice. "Hello, Gerry. I'm glad you're back. Sara and I were worried about you last night."
The young man relaxed visibly. The captain laughed. "What now, Miss Dacre? That's about it. Miss Jenkins knows him better than you."
"Oh, Judith!" pleaded Sara. "Look at him again! This isn't Gerry Hone. This is a phony, a ringer."
Judith's black brows met quickly in a frown of distaste. "Sara, are you insane? Of course this is Gerry Hone."
Judith crossed the room and put an arm around Sara's shoulders. "My dear, you don't know what you're saying."
"You were friendly to me last night until you saw the pendant I'd been wearing under my cape," Sara told her. "Then you were angry and suspicious. You knew the ruby was real then. Why didn't you tell me?"
Capt. Sanders moved forward. "So you actually saw the famous ruby, Miss Jenkins?"
"Yes," Judith sat down and looked at the stranger at her throat.

Mortality Of Cancer Lessened

NEW YORK, N.Y. —Encouragement is seen by the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the measure of progress made during the past decade in reducing cancer mortality among adults prior to midlife. In the experience of the insurance company's industrial policyholders, mortality from malignancies among white females showed a decrease during the past decade for each age group of the range from 15 through 44, the reductions varying from 9 percent at ages 25-34 to 18 percent at ages 35-44. Among white males in this experience the mortality improved appreciably at ages 15-24, and was virtually unchanged at ages 25-44; in the age group 25-34, however, the trend was upward. The relatively favorable trend for women is accounted for by a considerable decline in the mortality from cancer of the genital organs, and by a downward trend in malignancies of the digestive system. "The progress made in the control of cancer among adults prior to midlife reflects both the increased tendency to seek medical care
